Additional information concerning LED products: LED products, by their nature, are very sensitive to heat, installation and operation must be within the product guidelines and, if no installation instructions are provided, in a good and workmanlike manner by competent installers. LED products must be installed in applications where ambient temperatures are within the range of specified operating temperatures and are operated within the electrical values shown on the LED driver. Any questions about installation should be directed to Coronet prior to any installation. Unauthorized removal of LED modules will void the warranty. A reduction in luminous flux is normal as long as the relevant value does not fall below 0.6%/1000h burning hours. A luminous flux within that range is considered normal and not a defect. Due to technical progress and changes in the luminous flux of products that is caused by their use, subsequent deliveries of LED light sources may have light properties deviating from those of the original products Coronet warrants that the initial LED Correlated Color Temperature (CCT) at the time of shipment will be within described parameters as stated in the Coronet product specification sheet. If the product specification sheet specifies a certain Correlated Color Temperature only and not parameters, Coronet warrants that the CCT will be within 10% of that CCT, or within the range specified on the specification sheet at the time of shipment. Coronet further warrants that the initial luminous flux will be within 10% of the range specified in the specification sheet at the time of shipping. Coronet will not be responsible for any color shift in LED modules installed in Coronet fixtures. Color changes or shifts in LED lighting are a natural consequence of LED lighting and shall not be considered a defect covered by this limited warranty.
