Many projects that are funded by the federal government through federal agencies' procurement activities and through the award of federal grants and loans require the use of domestic products or components. These requirements typically apply to projects utilizing U.S. federal funds but may also apply to state or municipally funded projects. In addition, individual states or municipalities may establish their own preferences for products or components made within the state or locality. This summary describes Coronet's compliance with federal preferences for domestic products and components and its commitment to transparency regarding the same

Federal "Buy American" regulations, which are part of the overarching Federal Acquisition Regulation, apply to the direct procurement of goods by the federal government for its own use. Under these regulations, all goods purchased for use by the federal government must be "domestic end products." Domestic end products are manufactured in the United States with more than 60% (65% in 2024 and 75% in 2029) of the cost of their individual components being mined, produced or manufactured in the United States.

Buy American regulations provide for certain waivers to the domestic end product requirement, including the "commercially available off-the-shelf" ("COTS") waiver. Under the COTS waiver, a commercial product that is sold in substantial quantities in the commercial marketplace and is offered to the federal government under a contract or subcontract in the same form in which the product is sold in the commercial marketplace, without modification, meets the definition of a "domestic end product" under Buy American regulations even if the cost of its components mined, produced or manufactured in the United States does not meet the required percentage.

All of Coronet's products that are offered for procurement under contracts or subcontracts with a federal agency qualify for the COTS waiver and therefore are considered domestic end products under Buy American regulations.
